Dates To Remember:

April 28: Last Day of Spring classes
May 1-5: Final Exam Period
April 29-May 8: You can begin to see your final grades in AU Access. Faculty members will post grades during this timeframe, and you will be able to see them the next day in AU Access.
May 5: Summer eBill due
May 9: All Final Grades should be posted in AU Access.
May 18: Summer Classes Begin
Mid July: First eBill of Fall semester will be posted and is usually due in early August. Schedules are subject to cancellation for non-payment.
August 21: Spring Classes Begin

Don’t forget to complete the Transfer Student Survey, Due: Sunday (5/14)
https://auburn.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_bdRXsMEnmSLoZWI

Insider Tips for Auburn’s Transfer Students

Finals Tips

It may seem like you started classes just last week and in a blink of an eye, the semester is almost over. With that, comes Finals Week. These are some tips to help you be successful during finals:

- Double check your final exam schedule: Finals often do not meet during your normal class time so be sure to know when your exams are scheduled.
- Start studying early: While it may be tempting to wait until the night before your exam to start studying this is not the best way to be successful. Remember these exams are often longer and cover more material so you need more time to prepare. Begin refreshing your memory on some of the early and/or harder chapters now so you have more time to understand it and commit it to memory.
- Be realistic: Real talk - finals at times can feel like an impossible task without holding yourself to even higher unrealistic standards. You may not be able to do everything up to your normal standards—and that is ok. Take into account your grades, the hours you actually have and what is possible to accomplish, and then act accordingly.
- Spend more time on your highest need classes: While it may sound obvious, without the proper planning it can be harder to put into practice. Know what you need to make on each exam to get the overall grades you desire and then make sure to give yourself enough time on your more difficult topics/courses. You want to avoid spending a lot of time on topics that you already know or will be barely be covered on an exam.
- Choose a productive environment: Think back to where you study best. Is it in your environment:
- Choose a productive environment: Think back to where you study best. Is it in your
- Bed?
- Room?
- Library?
- Coffee shop?
- Anywhere you feel comfortable and can concentrate?
- Take into account your grades, the hours you actually have and what is possible to accomplish, and then act accordingly.
- Plan study breaks: Remember to plan in breaks to give your mind a rest and then work hard between those breaks. This will help you focus on your work leading up to the break, rather than working aimlessly.
- Get ready for each exam: Make sure to gather all of the materials you’ll need like a pencil, scanntron, or watch to keep track of time during the test in advance so you are not stressing right before your exam. You may also want to set extra alarms or ask friends to help make sure you are awake for your tests so you don’t accidentally oversleep.

Preparing for the Break Tips

Summer is approaching, which could mean a long break from school and spending time with family and old friends back home. Here are a few things you should do before, during and after your break.

Before you leave for the Summer Break, take some time to plan your break and any possible vacations or activities. That way you know exactly what you need to bring home and when you need to be back to campus for the start of the Summer or Fall semester.

During the break, use this time to fully unwind and reflect on the experiences of the previous semester. Did your classes and your experience here go the way you wanted? If not, use this time to figure out how to make your next semester better. This is also a perfect time to reconnect with old friends, and get back into your hobbies. Don’t forget to use this time to make sure you are ready for the Summer or Fall semester (i.e. confirm your schedule, and plan how to get textbooks).

Going back home after you have developed your independence at Auburn can also be a transition. It can be an adjustment because you may still be expected to fit back into the rules and responsibilities you previously had and you could temporarily lose some of your freedoms you had here. Since this can be a transition for both you and your family, make sure to communicate with them and discuss expectations you both have so you are able to find a compromise everyone can live with.

Going home for summer break can also make you realize the things that you miss about home, and make your next semester a little harder. Know that this is normal and many students can have second semester homesickness. It can be helpful to rely on your support group (either here or back home), talk with Student Counseling Services (auburn.edu/scs/), or try to have fun experiences to fill your time here (football, road trips, campfire nights, students organizations, day trips, etc.).

Enjoy your time away from school and rejuvenate yourself before the Summer or Fall semester.